

ABSTRACT OF THE DISCLOSURE

A load-distribution method that transmits packets received from a network to two or more transmission destinations to distribute a load,
5 comprising storing a weight value of distribution and an accumulated value according to actual transmission for every transmission destination, and transmitting the received packets, upon occurrence of a distribution event, to a transmission
10 destination that has a smallest accumulated value.

00001304, 110101